TIMELESS BEAUTY

by Deyan Parouchev

with Catherine Loewe, Liu Xiaoqing, Yazemeenah Rossi

In the heart of the always controversial and standardized fashion industry, a new trend seeks to fight back the ideas of beauty imposed on us by a society obsessed with youth. Senior and atypical models are now the new catwalk protagonists, shaking up the codes. Throughout the world, they tell their stories and dreams.

With Tess Holliday, the first and most famous Plus Size Model in the world. And with Liu Xiaoqing, a cult actress and one of the richest and most powerful women in China.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

The big actors of the fashion world have often tried to format, to influence, to erase, and to exclude those who do not conform to their ephemeral definitions of beauty. Yet, in recent years, a reverse dynamic has begun and the faces and bodies that now grace the catwalks and fashion magazines are no longer so smooth, uniform, or perfectly proportioned as before. This has driven me to consider whether this is just a passing fad or a consequence of deeper changes in our society's codes and canons.

DIRECTOR'S BIOGRAPHY

Deyan Parouchev is a Bulgarian photographer and director of photography whose work for companies such as Google, McDonald's and L'Oréal has been shown all over the world. After a career of 15 years in the advertising industry, Timeless Beauty is his documentary feature debut.

CAST BIOGRAPHY

Catherine Loewe, a lawyer by training, started her modelling career at 57 spotted by an agency. She quickly swept the catwalks of luxury houses and became the muse of Jean Paul Gaultier.

Jan de Villeneuve began her modelling career in 1966. After many collaborations with the greatest photographers of the time, she took a long hiatus to resume her career at 73.

Philippe Dumas, discovered at 60 thanks to a video that went viral on the internet. With over 24K followers on Instagram, he took the fashion world by storm.

Yazemeenah Rossi at 60 continues to be a model, besides being a visual and manual artist based in Los Angeles.
